ABBAS MORTADA - Minister of Culture

The Lebanese cinema is in the midst of a gigantic development cycle, marked by the release of an increasing number of movies over the past few years as well as the emergence of new and talented actors. The country is definitely on the right track, as the strategies promoted by the Ministry of Culture and the Fondation Liban Cinema are now bearing their fruits. Protocols signed with foreign countries have definitely contributed to these results, and will certainly be part of more future expansion.

We are very proud of the successes achieved so far by Lebanon on the international scene. After the successive nominations of “The Insult” by Ziad Doueiri in 2018 and “Capernaum” by Nadine Labaki in 2019 to the Oscars’ best foreign language film award, 2 new movies by Lebanese directors have been selected to feature in this year’s Cannes film festival official list of nominees, as both Jimmy Keyrouz with “Broken Keys” and Danielle Arbid with “Passion Simple” have been selected by what is considered the most prestigious film festival in the world.

We are extremely proud of what has been achieved so far by this sector, thanks to the collaboration of talented private organizations such as fondation Liban du Cinema. That was the initial goal of the Fondation, and we now recognize its success.

Even with the difficult times Lebanon is going through, the Ministry of Culture will always work on reviving arts and culture, and on developing & expanding the various cultural fields of our beloved country. Cinema is unquestionably one of its key constituents.
MAYA DE FREIGE - President of Fondation Liban Cinema

A year unlike any other year!

It could have been the title of a film if life were just cinema. And the events that marked the autumn of 2019 until the spring of 2020 could have been a script, a fiction that we watched from a distance, to be viewed with a critical eye. But this was not experienced on a screen: it was an extraordinary, unprecedented reality, the stuff of many documentaries to come.

A year unlike any other year: a pandemic has swept the world, and Lebanon has not been spared. Lebanon had already been caught in a whirlwind of revolutionary change starting in October 2019. For over three months, the young people of Lebanon were on the streets demanding their rights to a better life. The battle is not yet won, but it has started, and there is still a long way to go.

There is no doubt that this has been a most difficult period. The end of the tunnel seems far away. The outlook for supporting the arts is dire. But in difficult times artists respond by transforming their experiences into greater creativity. Artistic productivity is born from adversity. Despite everything, Lebanon continues to make films. At the Fondation Liban Cinema, we encourage film-making that questions and shakes up our understanding of the world, challenging the viewer.

For now and into the future uncertainty prevails. The pandemic will impact both production and consumption patterns, as well as, the way we work and socialise more generally. Will this last forever? Of all the arts, film is perhaps the most capable of responding by seizing this reality. Film-making will be enriched with stories and insights. The lockdown has given space and time for reflection, changing the habitual lenses we use: people have been able to stop for a while, reviewing priorities and rethinking objectives. Lebanese artists in particular will have to reinvent the world around them and adapt to the big changes the country is going through. That requires creativity and dreams. And film is our dream factory!

At the Fondation Liban Cinema, we will be there with each and every one of these filmmakers, capturing this world as they will be, in all its beauty and madness.

Fondation Liban Cinema is a non-governmental organization that plays a powerful and effective federating role in the Lebanese audiovisual industry. Fondation Liban Cinema is unique by its mission of a Film Commission that links Lebanese professionals locally and abroad among them and with the public sector and advocates to their cause, a mission that no other organization in the field fulfills.

Official cooperation links Fondation Liban Cinema to the public sector giving her the mandate to negotiate coproduction agreements, to attract investments in the media field and help the film industry grow and compete.

OUR OBJECTIVES:
• Supporting the development of a competitive Lebanese film industry
• Professionalizing and structuring the sector
• Financing the development of the local film industry with a high level of quality and controlled budgets
• Establishing Lebanon as a prominent international production location
• Facilitating local film production
• Promoting the Lebanese cinema industry locally and abroad
• Preserving Lebanese audiovisual heritage
• Restoring and showcasing audiovisual archives.
• Collecting data and elaborating studies to propose public accompanying measures necessary for the development of the sector.

The Investment Development Authority of Lebanon (IDAL) has always recognized the importance of the film industry and its contribution to the economy. As such, IDAL has been entrusted to support and promote this industry, as part of its overall support to the media sector, as well as highlight the untapped opportunities it offers to local and foreign investors alike.

The successes of Lebanon's film industry are too many to count, and the talent and creativity spans across all stages of production. Two Lebanese films were selected for the 2020 Cannes Film Festival, Passion Simple by Danielle Arbid and Broken Keys by Jimmy Keyrouz. Let us not forget the recent nomination of The Insult by Ziad Doueiri and Capernaum by Nadine Labaki, in the Academy Awards’ Best Foreign Language Film Category during two consecutive years (2017 and 2018) for the first time in history. All this is nothing but a reminder of how much the Lebanese film industry can achieve.

Despite the challenges faced by global and media industry as a result of COVID we still believe that Lebanon can take a leading role in the Middle East as hub for movie production tapping on its talent, multifaceted scenery, trilingual population and unbearable lifestyle. IDAL will take the opportunity in this challenging environment to work with all stakeholders to promote the local industry, amend needed legislations to boost filming in Lebanon and ensure that the sector is provided with the right facilities.

With IDAL’s support, we hope to contribute to establishing Lebanon as a regional hub for production and post-production, paving the way for many more success stories in the years to come.

IDAL is Lebanon’s national investment promotion agency that aims to promote Lebanon as a key investment destination, and attracting, facilitating and retaining investments in Lebanon. IDAL provides local and foreign investors alike with a range of incentives and business support services across eight productive sectors with growth potential, including the media sector.

If you are involved in the film industry, in either production, post-production or distribution and the size of your investment in Lebanon is USD 200,000 or USD 400,000 (capital investment in land or machinery) and creates a minimum of 25 jobs, you are eligible to benefit from a range of incentives and services including:

- Up to 100% exemption on corporate income tax for up to 10 years
- Up to 100% exemption on profits from dividends for up to 10 years
- 100% exemption on land registration fees
- 50% reduction on work and residence permits for foreign workers
- Mediating contacts between local producers, international funds and distributors
- Providing market information on the film industry and its potential

At any time during the investment process, you can also benefit from IDAL’s free legal and financial advisory services. To book an appointment and for more information, visit us on www.investinlebanon.gov.lb

After being selected twice in La Quinzaine des réalisateurs, what impression does it make to be in the official selection of Cannes film festival amid a global pandemic that prevents this event to take place and what do you expect from it?

I am naturally very happy that “Passion Simple” is in the official selection of Cannes Film Festival. It is the most beautiful showcase in the world for a film. A great opportunity to shine. For the past two days, we have received many requests and calls concerning the film. Even without a physical festival, the impact of Cannes label is undeniable. This year, and as an exception, being in the official selection of Cannes Festival will not prevent us from being in any other A festival, and so my film will be part of other important selections that will be announced very soon... We are very excited !

Do you consider 2020 a wasted year? What does it mean for independent filmmakers?

2020 was a very complicated year for artists around the world, in France and especially in Lebanon. But nothing will ever stop the dream. During those three months, I was able to continue writing my next scenario. It helped me believe that life will soon resume. I would like to point out that Thierry Fremaux’s determination to keep the festival running, his love of cinema and his desire to highlight this year’s films and their filmmakers are amazing. He gave hope to the artists and to the cinema industry.

What are your dreams for cinema after COVID19?

To go back to the cinema theatres very soon!

Do you consider 2020 a wasted year? What does it mean for independent filmmakers?

No we don’t, the notion of wasted year is terrible. In our environment, some call it a blank year, but in reality, it’s not really that, it’s a few months rather than a year. But it is true it created a shock and changes.

Cinema is paralyzed everywhere, at all levels: festivals, shootings, post productions, distribution, movie theaters. Many films could not be finished, shot or shown. We personally would like to be able to finish our film, Memory Box. We fear that the auteurs films, the independent ones will be the first victims of this situation. But in parallel, all of us have been reflecting about our priorities, about the films we would like to do, to see, and about those which are important. What is positive is that this crisis compels us to address the essentials and to do it as a matter of urgency. The crisis refocuses us, it strengthens our convictions and encourages us even more to fight in favor of a certain cinema.

Do you think that the strategy of production will need to change after COVID19?

It all depends on the films and how we decide to produce them. It also depends on the state of the world and on what is happening at the political level around us. Each and every one of us has felt that our world must change (in Lebanon even more than anywhere else). Films will reflect this need. The production of films will be more difficult and those with a spirit of consensus, aimed at large audiences might be even more privileged. We will have to be smart. And to adapt. Both of us are used to make films with all kinds of budgets, some of them microscopic. What is essential is to remain faithful to one’s vision and to one’s film, even if money is lacking. No giving in and compromise! But what will prove difficult is to shoot in some countries, some kind of stories. For example, how can you film a crowd, or a love scene between two persons in this period of Covid 19? It is a global crisis, at the world’s level, shared by us all.

What are your dreams for cinema after this crisis?

Cinema doesn’t have to prove it is necessary and important. However, we believe this crisis has made it both more vulnerable and more valuable. Apart from the increasing will to make films, there is a solidarity in the cinema community which to us must be essential and we would like to see it strengthened in the future. Mutual help, mutual encouragement. There should be a change in the conception of films, but the showing in movie theater should be privileged. The number of streamers greatly increased during the period of lockdown, and there is a risk of having people consider they have seen a lot of cinema. True, we all saw a lot of films during the confinement, but the cinema, the movie theater, the sharing remain important elements. This experience is unique: the sharing, the debate, the community feeling are essential.
We are already at the very beginning of a new chapter of cinema. Lebanese cinema to reinvigorate. I imagine that the current situation will encourage the filmmakers to shoot quickly, with simple means, pushing the thinking and making films. Making movies in Lebanon never stopped even during the Civil War. At the contrary, the war witnessed the emerging of new series entirely funded by an international platform. Does the current economic and financial crisis open new opportunities the industry must seize? In Lebanon, we have to deal with many crisis at the same time. So besides the global restrictions caused by the pandemic, the economic crisis and the lack of liquidity are very problematic as well when it comes to filming. It is necessary therefore to rely on co-productions with international countries, obtain fresh money to be able to film on a daily basis. Nevertheless, even the access to this money is becoming very difficult with the Lebanese banking system that is imposing new rules every day. On the other hand, given the interest of international platforms like Netflix to develop new projects in the region, it’s very probable to witness the emerging of new series entirely funded by an international platform. Making a film in Lebanon is already a battle in itself and with all these problems, the struggle will become much harder. Does the current economic and financial crisis open new opportunities the industry must seize? Making movies in Lebanon never stopped even during the Civil War. At the contrary, the war witnessed the emerging of a new generation of Lebanese filmmakers who wanted to react to reality through cinema. These films represent the pillars of the Lebanese industry. They redefine cinematographically the coming decades and changed forever the way of thinking and making films. I think that the current crisis will drive a new generation of artists to use art cathartically and express their anger through films. I imagine that the current situation will encourage the filmmakers to shoot quickly, with simple means, pushing the Lebanese cinema to reinvigorate. We are already at the very beginning of a new chapter of cinema.

Surviving the Crisis - Georges Schoucair - Producer

COVID19 has given digital a head start. What do you think of the future of cinemas internationally? Will consumption patterns change? The COVID pandemic has put all us in a very specific context that makes it difficult to generalize and imagine what the future will look like. I feel we cannot extend the rules and activities that surfaced during this period on a longer post-pandemic time. It is true that the pandemic caused the rise of online platforms and resulted in the temporary closure of cinema venues that are now facing a lot of difficulty and risk permanent closure. For independent cinema, the types of films that Metropolis defends, VOD platforms have helped us in the past expand our audiences beyond the limited circle of cinema lovers and festival goers. VOD platforms form an important share of the commercial film market and are capable of competing with a commercial circuits in terms of mass consumption. It is not necessarily the case for art house cinemas and independent films, where on the contrary, VOD platforms can help extend the film’s reach and prolong its life after its theatrical release. That said, cinema theaters have to reinvent their selves and re-think its business model in order to adapt to the new context. It is very important that independent cinemas survive this crisis, because the need to collectively watch films in a dark space did not disappear. What art house cinema venues offer is a time and space for human exchange before, during and after the film screening! This is what distinguishes it from commercial cineplex screens. This desire for shared experience through cinema is what makes it impossible for online modes of film viewing to fully replace the appreciation of a cinema-going experience.

The Film Industry regretted deeply the closure of Metropolis Art Cinema. Are you thinking of Alternatives to replace it? The closure of the venue was a shock to us because it came after a very successful fundraiser that would have allowed us to survive during almost a year. However, this closure that was decided without our consultation, offered us the chance to better think the structure of the association and its mission in the current context, thinking especially of a venue that is more adapted to the current financial constraints of the country, a venue that is more independent and that can be collectively programmed with more than one partner. Whilst actively looking for a new home for Metropolis, we initiated partnerships with various spaces in and outside Beirut in order to decentralize our programs a little bit. We hope that these partnerships will continue even after we find a space of our own.

How do you see the future of independent Lebanese film distribution? The last few years saw a boom in production and distribution of Lebanese films in Lebanon and the region. Also, during the last decade Lebanese films have been more and more present on the screens in the country and abroad, creating a curiosity and a thirst for Lebanese films by the local audiences that trusted the quality and relevancy of these films. I believe the current crisis will mostly affect the production and distribution of commercial productions that were more profit oriented and that relied mostly on private funding and investments. The films that will be able to survive are the ones that are born from a real desire of filmmaking, films that are mostly funded by grants and that are present in the festival circuits and are able to find a place on the international film market. One of the reasons that we are eager to have a space again, is to give a platform for these films, that don’t make it to the commercial screens, to find their potential audiences.

AN OPEN ROSE - by Ghassan Salhab

Running time: 72 min / Genre: Documentary / Year of production: 2019

And in the darkness, I smile at life.” This sentence, written by Rosa Luxemburg in solitary confinement at the end of 1917, gets to the very heart of what characterises her letters from prison: a shining joie de vivre, regardless of the political situation. Her descriptions of birds, flowers, clouds and colours demonstrate an awareness of nature’s beauty experienced with all the senses. Numerous excerpts from the radical socialist’s lyrical letters in both German and Arabic form the threads running through this essayistic collage. They are joined by modern-day shots of wintry Berlin, a two-person reading in Beirut, archive material from the First World War, a battle song of the labour movement, traces of Nico, Gerhard Richter, Brecht, Breton, voices, sounds, music and the soundless comments of a self. Together, they form a polyphony of visually and acoustically overlapping layers. From this retrospective look at the 20th century, at Germany and the Middle East, at the militant struggles that took place both here and there, emerge personal conclusions as well as the acknowledgement that resistance and beauty can indeed co-exist, not least in dark times.

AS ABOVE, SO BELOW – by Sarah Francis
A group of people roam in a bare landscape around a set of swings as their only settlement, as if mapping, exploring, reorganizing the open territory they are in. As they move, changes in soundscapes make them virtually cross geographies. In the sky, a moon-like satellite roves above their heads, following them like an omen. The moon, once symbolizing cyclical times, myths and new beginnings, is now the satellite waiting to be conquered and colonized. Reality and fantasy intertwine in an existential quest. Is a new beginning really possible? As below, so above.

BEIRUT HOLD’EM - by Michel Kammoun
Running time: 94 min / Genre: Social Drama / Year of production: 2019 / Looking for: Distribution

Six months in the life of Ziko, a 40-year old ex-con and petty gambler, and his three boyhood friends, in a seedy, lower-middle class district of Beirut. Ziko is released from prison and wants to restart his life. Ziko and his friends share one passion, besides their boyhood memories. They’re all fanatic about gambling and horseracing. And ultimately, they organize a scam they hope will rescue them from their troubles. But everyone knows that, once a gambler, always a gambler. Ziko’s biggest fight turns out to be his inner struggle. Should he continue doing what he knows best? Should he surrender to fate? When you have no choice, does it make it easier to choose? Beirut Hold’em also depicts the destiny of four middle-class “guys,” fighting their way into a country on the edge of war and bankruptcy, where instability makes everyday life feel like a circus trapeze, and sheer existence is yet another form of gambling.

ERRANS - by Mira Adoumier
Running time: 67 min / Genre: Experimental Fiction / Year of production: 2020 / Looking for: Distribution

A woman arrives in Lebanon in search of a missing man, whom she met in Iceland a few years ago. Here, the buildings and landscapes still bear the traces of past conflicts, and the missing friend’s absence is haunting the deserted and labyrinthine streets of Beirut. The siren song of the sea draws her to the south, towards Earth’s mystical centre. Mira Adoumier’s ‘Errans’ is an aural and visual essay which evokes the alienating sense of exile that the filmmaker herself grew up with. A beautiful and levitating visual work from a place and a state of mind where myths and cultures occupy parallel spaces. With Iceland’s rugged landscapes and Beirut’s urban topography as the two coordinates that her film is stretched out between, Adoumier’s background as an artist is evident in her first longer film work. But there is also an elliptical narrative embedded in the impressionistic form of ‘Errans’.

ZEINAB ON THE SCOOTER- by Dima El-Horr
Running time: 81 min / Genre: Documentary / Year of production: 2019 / Looking for: Distribution

Shot in Lebanon, the film follows Zeinab, 23 years old, a quite rebellious Muslim Shi’a veiled woman who works in an association that grants micro-credits loans to people in precarious financial circumstances in the popular areas of Beirut. For the need of her work, Zeinab browses the city aboard a grey scooter that will become pink, defying her male colleagues who, because they adopted the scooter as mode of transportation, realize higher turnover than girls. In addition, the film follows her in her family and love life, with a main question in mind: How being a young Lebanese woman today, living in the popular neighborhoods of Beirut and wants to assert her individuality in a patriarchal and communitarian society? By displaying her desire for emancipation and freedom, Zeinab manifests not only her singularity but also her contradictions.

ABANDONED - by Samer Beyhum
Running time: 12:48 min / Genre: Realism/Social Issues / Year of production: 2019

Nour is a 13 year old young girl whose mother, a Lebanese woman, is married to a stateless Palestinian man. On a sunny road trip day, the family is set upon by Antar, a thug with politically affiliated impunity, who, in an instance of road rage, murders the father and mother. Owing to Lebanese law, where Lebanese women married to foreigners may not pass on their citizenship to their children, Nour finds herself abandoned to the streets of Beirut where she finds solidarity and support from Nayla, a prostitute.

REGARDE-MOI - by Davina Maria
Running time: 3 min 50 sec / Genre: Experimental-Essay / Year of production: 2020

« (re)garde-moi » is a celebration of the gaze, love and cinema, it’s a super 8 film shot mostly with the in-camera editing technique (tourné-monté) and a sound design that was done separately before the development of the film.
« (re)garde-moi » is an 8mm short visual poem that could mean « look at me », « watch me », (re) see me » in the English language. « Le regard » means « the look », « the stare », or even « the glance ». In this film, the verb « regarder » means « to gaze », « to look at someone or something for a long time. However, when we dissect the verb « regarder », it is composed of a prefix « re » (used for repetition; to show that something is done again) and a root « garder » which means « to keep ». The verb is, therefore, hard to translate to English as it hides other definitions that I mean to express while using it throughout the film.

AFTER THE END OF THE WORLD – by Nadim Mishlawi
Creative Documentary - Current Status: Post-production - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Post-Production Funds – International sales – Festivals – Distribution
After the End of the World is a cartography gathering the testimonies of different characters as they try to make sense of Lebanon’s capital, Beirut, 20 years after the civil war left it ruined. Focusing on the frenzied urban development (and destruction) of the reconstruction period, the film is built around the exploits of a photographer who is convinced that the city of Beirut is disappearing. Exploring the possibility of a “science fiction” documentary, the film uses an array of different visual and audio material including Betamax tape, 16mm, news archives, still photography, and digital cinematography, transforming the screen into a plane of information depicting events, anecdotes, moments, and ideas, spiraling into a modern dystopia.

DO YOU LOVE ME – by Lana Daher
Documentary - Current Status: Development and early Production - Countries: Lebanon, Germany - Looking for: Potential co-production, world sales agents, distributors, broadcasters

‘Do You Love Me’, is an archive-based documentary named after the widely popular Bendaly Family song that was released during the Lebanese Civil War, which started on April 13, 1975. It is about the generations of Lebanese that grew up during and after the war. The film tells the story of this society through the country’s musical and cinematic archives. Using mainly archive footage and no talking heads, the film weaves the stories and anecdotes of the men, women and children who remained in Lebanon through these years. The soundcapes of the film (interviews, radio archives and songs) will bind the different narrative lines together and serve as a link between the past and the present. Interweaving the songs of then and now, with intimate personal stories of both the artists of the time and the youth, we re-tell the history of a country and people with no written history. At the end of the Lebanese Civil War, the same warlords who ran the country during the war were re-elected to form a government. Since October 17, 2019, people are revolting and that government has finally been overthrown. Despite awakening, the Lebanese are unable to agree - neither over what happened during the war and nor about what should happen next.

Creative Documentary - Current Status: Post Production - Countries: Lebanon - Netherlands - Looking for: Post-Production Funds & Distribution Funds

Through a video journal, Lebanese director Nicolas Khoury questions with humor the loneliness that seems to run through his family, while going through personal archives and his past amateur genre teen films. This intimate film shows the strong and, at time, dysfunctional relationship that binds Nicolas, his mother Nelly, and his sister Tamara after the father’s death in 2005. Tamara’s marriage in 2018 and her departure from the family home leaves the single mother face to face with her son. Through a humorous and sarcastic routine that settles between the two of them, Nelly questions the relationship path that Nicolas doesn’t seem to be following, highlighting the anxieties and worries that exist between mother and son.

PIGEON WARS – by Dania Bdeir
Drama - Current Status: Rewriting the screenplay - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Creative Producer
RAO (20) is a feisty, hypercompetitive and self emancipated student living alone and wreaking havoc in the patriarchal streets of Beirut. When she stumbles upon “Pigeon Wars”, the male-dominated competitive sport, she becomes obsessed with dominating that world and reclaiming the skies. She sets her mind on a beautiful rare bird that she wants to capture to gift to her only friend in the world, her little sister NADINE (14). To infiltrate this subculture, Rana needs to work with the dutiful and compliant HASSAN (21), a young man from a very conservative and politically charged part of Beirut. The king of pigeon wars, Hassan practices in secret so as not to disappoint his demanding family. After a rocky start in which they both butt heads at every turn, Rana finally lowers her defenses and lets Hassan in. Their bond and genuine connection teaches them about themselves and about each other. Rana ends up realizing the underlying tension behind her relentless drive and her need to stop running and start facing her own demons.

SIRO – by Dima El-Horr

Documentary Current Status: Post Production Country: Lebanon Looking for: Distribution

The film takes place at a precise period in Siro’s life, 84 years old, painter and actress: I follow her in her mourning period, when she lost her husband, the stage director Berge Fazlian, in her loneliness, but also when she turns again to life and breathes again. While reflecting on the present, Siro moves in time, and without dramatization, returns to major events in her life which leads her to assess her life and try to understand the meaning of her existence. And it is precisely the doubts and the disappointments that conceal her assurance and emancipation that I would like to bring out. How is a woman with such a modern mindset and spirit, who not only a nostalgic reflection but also a self-criticism. paradox of this tragic and “Romanesque” character which seems to me essential to question and deepen. Thus, this film becomes an attempt to reach a final destination and put this tragedy to rest. It’s a journey to understand and to heal ourselves in the absence of national reconciliation.

THE DANCING PLAGUE

Documentary - Current Status: In Production Country: Lebanon - France - Looking for: Distributor

Set against the turbulent atmosphere of Lebanon, The Dancing Plague is a feature documentary that plunges headfirst into the country’s night-time, the characteristics of which reflect the different social evolutions the country has experienced. The film takes its name from an ancient plague that infected various populations across the world, causing them to dance hysterically in the streets, and explores the phenomena by studying the dancers, their movements, and their impetus. The Dancing Plague is more than just a film about night-time; it is an illustration of a country and its soul, a reflection on the formations of myth, and unique insight into the current revolutionary movements that sparked across the globe and plunegs into the depths of the collective unconscious of a society in flux.

SILENT OF THE PLAINS – by Zeina Sfeir

It was an article in today's paper. Following Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri’s assassination, the international tribunal would be open to investigate previously unsolved war crimes. The Rayak massacre was mentioned. It would officially be the first mention of the crime in a newspaper. The article circulated among the family. It was over 40 years ago.

Bekaa Valley, Lebanon, 1976. Four men are murdered by a faceless militia and their bodies dumped in a church square near the Rayak train station. One of this victims was my uncle Georges Chababi. Who were these men that committed this horrible atrocity? More importantly, why do killings like this continue to haunt the Arab experience to this day?

The central figure in this tragedy is my cousin Elias Chababi. After his father Georges was murdered, Elias lived in our place for 5 months. Throughout this period no one told Elias that his father was murdered. He was a boy of only 13 years. It was one of the most painful silences our family ever had to endure. It’s through Elias’s eyes that we will retrace the story to reveal the moments that led up to this murder. We will hear the living testimonies of friends and family and open new paths to this case. Just as this tragedy was central to the historic landmark of Rayak train station in the Bekaa, these stories will lead us from stop to stop in an attempt to reach a final destination and put this tragedy to rest.

Feature Documentary - Current Status: In Production - Country: Lebanon - France - Looking for: Producer

I have always observed my neighbor Najla, from the window of my house in Karchima, my village in Lebanon. Najla is an eighty-year-old woman living alone in a small two-room house where she raised her four children. I remember her strong character and her courage. In fact, she was nicknamed “the sister of men” (اخت الرجال). She did not let herself be overawed, especially not by men. This woman endured more than fifteen years of civil war, she gave everything for her cause and ended up losing everything. Today, Najla finds herself abandoned, in extreme precariousness. What would have happened if Najla had left Lebanon before the war permanently impacted her life?

After several years of political activism, after having lost any hope of change in Lebanon, I moved to France for my Masters’ in cinema in 2014. Six years later, I’m still here.

The October 2019 Revolution renewed my faith. I feel the urgent need to return, to invest again in my country. Am I ready to pay the price, like Najla did? Will my old-age resemble hers?

Drama - Current Status: Late Development - Financing - Country: Lebanon - Canada - Looking for: Financing, sales agent distributor

Two sisters, whose parents were killed in Syria, escape to a refugee camp in Lebanon’s Bekaa Valley after fleeing war-worn Damascus. While Rima, who is seven months pregnant, is set on reuniting with her husband and rebuilding their lives in Lebanon, her younger sister Nour is determined to find their missing brother and eventually return home to Syria. In the camp, the sisters form alliances with other women who have lost their fathers, sons and husbands to the war. These friendships propel them onto separate paths: Rima works odd jobs so that she can rent an apartment before her baby is born while Nour sets out to investigate their brother’s whereabouts, risking her own safety in the process. As conditions in the camp worsen day by day, Rima and Nour begin to realize that their journey together into exile is not only a struggle for survival but ultimately a test of loyalty to their country, their family and each other.

WHEN THE REBELS HAVE WON (SUZANNE & OSMANE) – by Danielle Arbid
Feature Film - Current Status: Pre-Production - Countries: Lebanon, France, Germany - Looking for: Investors, Funds

Suzanne, a 60-year-old widow, meets Osman one rainy night in Beirut. He’s young, black, Sudanese, an immigrant worker without papers. She’s white, Lebanese, twice his age, forgotten by all in her well-ordered existence. They instantly fall in love.

Unable to marry because of his illegal status, Osman moves in with Suzanne. But the couple is shunned. Their love has everyone up in arms. Suzanne’s children, her neighbours, her co-workers, people in the street... Everyone is scandalised by this relationship. The same people who threw the country into civil war now stand there, judging. Even if the community later realises how much they need the couple.

The ambition of this film is to marry the poetry of this couple with the bleakness of their world. And of our own...

Lebanese women are amazing. They are unlike any other women in the world, in so many ways.

Let us introduce you to four very real, very different Lebanese women as they live and love in Beirut. We follow them as they deal with the contradictions of Lebanese society, each in their own way. We get to know them and relate to their joys and their downfalls. Light-hearted and fast-paced, we tackle heavy issues that all Lebanese men and women care about, but always in an entertaining way: friendship and relationships, dating and traditional set-ups, money and work, boyfriends and ex-husbands, families and obligations.

Throughout the first season, we watch each woman go through her own journey of self-discovery as she is faced with her own challenges.

It’s 3:00 AM. The prison warden arrives. An unpredicted visit with an unexpected order: to execute the death sentences of the prisoners Amir Nasser and Adham Mansour… Immediately and disregarding all the protocols. A series of strange events will follow: the prisoners’ cell starts burning and a new warden is directly appointed. It is just later, when the new warden leaves and that the condemned prisoners find themselves in the back of his car that all what happened will start to make sense.

Amir and Adham are now left with an officer to guard them until the sun rises. Sensing the long imagined freedom, the two will do everything that it takes to escape and never go back to jail. Looking for forged passports, the two outlaws, Amir and Adham, find themselves at Atouf’s house where the skilled Samara will do her perfect job… for free. Samara’s personality and beauty will leave Amir in awe.
