MAYA DE FREIGE - President of Fondation Liban Cinema

Energy of change...

Since October 2019, Lebanon has been experiencing an unprecedented social, economic and financial crisis impacting all cultural and creative actors who generate significant activities, especially economic ones, in the country.

Unfortunately, the film industry is not spared.

Film production has been impacted, suspended for lack of funds, filming delayed, film release postponed, all of this implying a substantial loss of earnings for professionals in the sector, and the flight of talent from the industry in search of new horizons.

Add to this the Corona pandemic and the planetary lockdown that made the world stop turning.

And then the cataclysm of August 4 happened!

And the double explosion that shook the port of Beirut finally brought down the multiple independent players and companies in the sector, the neighborhoods surrounding the scene of the tragedy welcoming many creators and artists.

However, in difficult times, artists respond by transforming their experiences into greater creativity.

In the aftermath of the blast, the filmmakers immortalized these appalling moments, and witnessed the tragic minute 6.07 and its consequences on an entire bruised city, a whole population wounded at its core, families separated from their loved ones, a heritage torn apart, an artistic community touched deep in its heart, an entire population traumatized, and that will remain so for a long time to come..

It is in this most difficult environment amplified by the lack of recognition of the wealth of the creative industry that the professionals, supported by the energy of the civil society actors who still believe in the potential of the audiovisual sector and the support of friendly countries, perpetuate the tradition in the 7th art.

And the successes are there! 4 films were selected in various sections of the Berlinale: “Memory Box” by Joana Hadjithomas & Khalil Joreige, in competition; “Death of a Virgin, and The Sin of Not Living” by George Peter Barbari; “Miguel’s War” by Eliane Raheb at the Panorama; and “All of Your Stars are But Dust on my Shoes” by Haig Aivazian at the Forum Expanded.

And a film selected for La Quinzaine des Réalisateurs at the Cannes Film Festival: “The sea Ahead”, Ely Dagher’s first feature film.

Lebanon produces intelligence and passion; cultural diversity is the wealth of this country and is its main message. We need to build on the positive development of the Lebanese film industry up to 2019 (see study conducted by the Lebanese Institute of Finance Basil Fuleihan).

It is therefore today more than ever essential, in a context of unprecedented crisis, to send strong messages, to retain the emigration of creative talents, to give them back the desire and the capacity to create and not only to survive, to rethink and relaunch a new creative economy, to pave the way and encourage the productive sectors which carry the hope of a possible crisis recovery.

FONDATION LIBAN CINEMA- FLC

The “Fondation Liban Cinéma” (FLC) is a non-profit private association whose objective is to participate in the development of cinema industry in Lebanon, through the support of creation, production and promotion of films, on the local and international level.

Since its creation, FLC is present in several areas, and via its activities it plays a federating role in the Lebanese audiovisual sector. The Board of Administration is formed of cinema professionals, financial experts and management executives.

FLC is distinguished by its strategic vision to develop a successful industrial creative sector, that generates a high turnover, jobs and most importantly visibility to Lebanon. Official cooperation links Fondation Liban Cinema to public authorities giving her the mandate to negotiate coproduction agreements, to attract investments in the media field and help the film industry grow and compete.

FONDATION LIBAN CINEMA OBJECTIVES:

- Supporting the development of a competitive Lebanese film industry
- Professionalizing and structuring the sector
- Financing the development of the local film industry with a high level of quality and controlled budgets
- Establishing Lebanon as a prominent international production location
- Facilitating local film production
- Promoting the Lebanese cinema industry locally and abroad
- Preserving Lebanese audiovisual heritage
- Restoring and showcasing audiovisual archives.
- Collecting data and elaborating studies to propose public accompanying measures necessary for the development of the sector.

THE INSTITUT DES FINANCES BASIL FULEIHAN

LAMIA MOUBAYED BISSAT - President of the Institut des Finances Basil Fuleihan

The year 2021, was declared International Year of Creative Economy for Sustainable Development at the 74th United Nations General Assembly. A long-awaited recognition that the diverse and multifaceted creative economy, is a lever capable of helping developing countries diversify their production and their exports. It is also a recognition that these industries are intrinsically linked to the achievement of the 2030 agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals, as they contribute to employment, growth, education, vocational training, citizenship, conflict prevention, gender equality and the creation of a local identity.

In this context, it is a great honor for the Institut des Finances Basil Fuleihan to present the study it has conducted with the support of the Institut Français of the French Embassy in Beirut and the French Development Agency on the contribution of creative and cultural industries to the Lebanese economy. The study drew an economic panorama of the CCIs, identified the structural, regulatory and fiscal obstacles that hinder their growth, provided supporting data of their contribution to the Lebanese economy between 2016 and 2019, with an in-depth analysis of the theater, festivals, film, jewelry, music streaming, and video games sectors. It also laid the foundation for a public policy for their revival and suggested courses of action to be undertaken by the international community to support this sector.

The study showed that the CCI contribute twice as much as agriculture to the creation of wealth in Lebanon and as much as the construction sector. It estimated the potential creative population at 360,000 (20% of the workforce) if artisans and skilled workers employed in support activities were included in the count.

It also highlighted that the CCIs were dramatically impacted by the triple economic, health and security crisis, and above all the blast of the Beirut port, plunging them into negative growth rates from 2019 onwards and draining Lebanon of its outstanding talents, concluding that they are today ENDANGERED and that immediate action is required to help them regain their potential as major drivers of growth and social development.

At IOF we believe that the devastated economic and social situation in Lebanon requires a new model of economic and social development. We believe that the current crisis should be seen as an opportunity to redesign Lebanon's production model, but also to establish strong grounds for the creative and cultural industries and fight against the sector's precariousness and informal employment.

This new model would be based on the lifeblood of Lebanon, particularly its youth and creativity as a main resource, a renewable, sustainable, limitless resource, and one of the country's major assets for a healthy reintegration into the commercial and financial circuits of globalization.

We believe that Lebanon's recovery requires the safeguard and growth of cultural and creative industries that generate wealth, jobs and exports in a context of depleted economy, and build on the unique characteristics of Lebanon: a cultural beacon of the Arab world, a haven of freedom of expression and a refuge for artists of the region.

Indeed, Lebanon's rich cultural heritage, with its values, its wealth of monuments and sites and its creative diversity of traditions, crafts, arts, architecture, literature, languages, theatre, films and music, not only reflects our past but also shapes our present and builds our future. It is who we are, it cultivates creativity, independent thinking and dialogue and promotes our values across the world.

The Institut des Finances Basil Fuleihan (www.institutdesfinances.gov.lb)

The Institut des Finances Basil Fuleihan is a specialized public autonomous institution operating under the tutelage of the Lebanese Minister of Finance. Created in 1996, shortly after the end of the civil war, the Institute is a knowledge hub that contributes to capacity development in public financial management through training, policy research, publications, access to information and partnership-building with more than 100 local, regional and international organisations. It provides policy advice and contributes to design visions and work plans for Public Finance Management (PFM) policy reform grounded in evidence and good practices. It provides advisory services in its core areas of expertise (listed below).

25 years since its creation, the Institute is recognized today for:

1. Leading and accompanying critical PFM reforms:
2. Being a front liner in Capacity Development
3. Its cumulated experience in change management, outreach and advocacy
4. Being a partnership and networking hub
5. Providing high-quality advisory services and technical assistance in the Arabic language

The Institute in brief - Excellence, dedication, efficiency and performance

- We build national capacities for sustainability.
- We have the know-how, ability and flexibility to accompany policy reform design and implementation as well as change management.
- We provide state-of-the-art expertise in professional training, learning, knowledge sharing, communication, and networking.
- We use a participatory approach to learning and promote peer-to-peer learning.
- We operate a network of more than 300 subject-matter experts.
- We believe in synergies.
- We are result-oriented.
- We constantly evaluate our work and seek continuous feedback from partners and beneficiaries.
- We are committed to the principles of integrity, transparency, and accountability.

The Sea Ahead, selected for Cannes Film Festival La Quinzaine des Réalisateurs

by Ely Dagher

3 questions to Ely Dagher

After winning the Palme d'Or for your short film Waves 98 in 2015, your first feature film The sea Ahead was selected at La Quinzaine des Réalisateurs. You rise through the ranks, quickly and surely. What are the secrets of your success?

I try not to think about that so much. I focus on writing and creating something I am passionate about and work on themes that I want to understand and explore. And I hope to present it in an honest way that can speak to the audience and stir a conversation.

You obtained an artist residency offered by the Fondation Liban cinema with the support of the Boghossian Foundation. According to you, what does the support of such an institution bring to a filmmaker's career?

We all know the difficulties with making films in Lebanon without any public funds or institutions and support such as the residency and promoting lebanese cinema especially at film festivals is crucial for the survival of the Cinema sector.

Are co-productions just a financial arrangement for you, or much more, a privilege to work with people from different nationalities?

We have a lot of talented producers here, Being from another nationality doesn't give someone a higher esteem. Unfortunately there's no way around searching for foreign co-productions because, for one it's a bigger pool of producers to look through if you haven't found a local partner that understands your vision of the film and two, you need them to try to access funds abroad and public funds to avoid putting in many private investors or Banks. But that also comes at the cost of whatever foreign expectations of your film are. It took so long to make the film because if you don't want to make concessions and stay true to your voice and vision it will take time to find the right partners and enough funds to shoot.

3 questions to Georges Schoucair

After Tramontane, The Sea Ahead; 2 films by About Productions selected for Critics' Week and La Quinzaine des Réalistes 5 years apart, it's a beautiful painting in a Lebanese scenery which, economically, struggles to remain standing ... how do you do it?

It took time and required a lot of energy and patience, especially in an economic context of crisis and in the absence of any funding institution. The devaluation of the Lebanese pound and the pandemic have pushed us to find creative and pragmatic solutions. French producer, Arnaud Domerc was also extremely responsive throughout pre-production and filming. In addition, we have been working for more than 10 years to improve the level of scriptwriting and forge ties with European and Arab partnerships, which has enabled us to support this new generation of directors.

It is important to point out that despite the deplorable situation in the country, Lebanese professionals continue to work. Platforms and series represent an opportunity for the industry that we hope to be able to seize.

Lebanon, which has always responded to the call of the Cannes Film Festival, will not have its pavilion in 2021 due to the multiple crises. For you professionals, how important is the existence of a unifying place that the FLC provided in such an international gathering?

This year is quite special for the Cannes Film Festival due to the pandemic and the international presence is expected to be more limited than usual. But in another context, it is always important to have a point of exposure in Cannes if the country's economy allows it. The Foundation provided with the Lebanese pavilion a meeting place that allowed producers, directors and film professionals to come together under the banner of this pavilion to discuss but also meet other partners. This pavilion was also an opportunity to launch several new initiatives that highlighted the evolution of Lebanese cinema on an international scale.

Your last film selected in competition at the Berlin Festival, Memory Box, is a Lebanon-France-Canada co-production. The Sea Ahead is a France-Lebanon co-production. Could you remind us of the importance of film co-production agreements for a country like Lebanon?

Co-productions have always been essential. We have always worked with European co-producers, Arab and European funds, international and television pre-sales ... We are working to maintain and strengthen our co-production agreements to compensate for the lack of a local production system.

3 questions to Arnaud Domerc

Returning to the Croisette after a year of absence and meeting with the public again. How important are the Festivals for you?

Despite many attempts and even successful ones at organizing festivals and co-production platforms online, it is obvious that the comeback of the onsite physical events is a relief and a great joy. Festivals are a place where the density offered by cinema is strongly reflected, for the organizers as well as for the attending professionals and audience. This unique vibe, this very special communion is definitely one of the great joys of this profession.

This is not your first experience with About Productions. Could you tell us about your collaboration and what it brings in terms of exchange between France and Lebanon?

About Productions is a special partner for me. My relationship with this company is not only professional, it is also a friendship one. We grew up together, and shared a lot of things: films, successes, but also life and distress. This mix between professional and personal has been a great opportunity for my journey. I have a passion for Lebanon since almost 10 years, and I am sure it will last for a long time.

The cinematographic landscape/scene is reinventing itself. Do you think that the promotion of films and crews, primary objective of the festivals, will suffer from that?

No, I think that the physical experience is part of what cinema offers since its invention: it is that famous cinematographic ontology of French critic André Bazin. This is what we all look for when we go to the cinema: to see bigger, in a stronger and more beautiful way what we experience or feel at every moment of our life but which we have often become incapable of seeing, hearing, feeling ... Streaming platforms offer something else, another form of entertainment, which may become the future's mainstream but which is not cinema. It's something else and it's interesting, but it's not cinema.

BEIRUT 21 OR HOW SHE FRAMED IT – by Pierre Mouzannar

Current Status: In Writing - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Coproducers

After having suffered from a violent heart attack and a surgery, Omar, a 29-year-old documentary filmmaker, recovers at his mother Lina’s house and wonders whether he should give up on the ongoing film he was working on: a documentary about Lebanon’s chaotic nature and its colorful revolution unfolding in real-time - the most important project of his life. As the collapse of his body and the destruction of his dreams coincide with the demise of his country and the rest of the world, Omar’s naive assumptions of life are violently crushed, giving way for chaos to reign over his confused and demented mind. Refusing to see her son drown deeper into despair, Lina, a bourgeois but warm-hearted woman decides to take matters into her own hands. With a tripod on her back and a camera around her neck, Lina throws herself blindly in the turbulent streets of Lebanon’s revolution to film and try to “save” her son’s project so he won’t have to give up on it.

IN A DREAM YOU SAW A WAY TO SURVIVE AND YOU WERE FULL OF JOY – by Remi Itani

Looking for: Co-producers

Layal, 21, comes home at night after a sexual encounter. She joins her mother, Salma, who isn't aware that her daughter is sexually active. Some weeks pass, Layal roams the empty spaces around her house at night. The next day she takes a pregnancy test-it’s positive. Layal avoids her mother’s presence, spending her time with her best friend Dania. The young women try to find the man who impregnated her, driving around his house, to no avail. They learn about a clandestine abortion clinic located in the suburbs of Beirut. The journey to get there takes place at night. Layal fears for her life when she witnesses the mishandled procedure of the patient before her; She flees the clinic and falls into despair. She tries to signal for help from her mother, whose attention is focused on her friend’s daughter, who took her own life, when faced with a similar situation like Layal’s. The man who impregnated Layal is back in the picture. Much older than Layal and well off, he sends her to a better-equipped clinic and pays her the expenses. Layal spends the last days of her pregnancy contemplating motherhood, despite knowing that there is no place for single mothers in Lebanon. Assuming a pseudonym, she goes through the procedure. After the procedure, Layal walks into her house, she sits facing her mother, a long silence occurs between them. Layal shifts her gaze towards pictures of her and her mother hung on the wall, then breaks the silence with a mundane conversation.

I AM HERE BUT YOU CAN’T SEE ME – by Feyrouz Serhal

Fantasy/ Thriller - Current Status: In Financing - Country: Lebanon/France/Spain - Looking for: Funding

In the fictitious city of Beirut lives Viola, a singer and a member of an underground movement that assassinates the corrupt politicians of the city. In the same city lives Farah, a son of a banker politician, who roams the city day and night like a ghost with no goal and no destination. As he drives one day, Farah gets to notice Viola while she is opposing the authorities in the middle of the street in a very daring gesture. Her strong energy and light attracts him like a magnet. And from that moment on he keeps on noticing her everywhere, but Viola keeps on disappearing from his field of vision. And while the city and Viola are in the middle of the operation plotting and assassinating corrupt leaders/former warlords, Farah becomes keen on finding this woman who unknowingly becomes his sign to his reality. As Viola is absorbed into her mission and her unwavering goal, Farah at last locates her; she is there on stage singing. Farah is drawn to her like a moth following the light, and while he believes that her light will save him, Viola uses him. With Farah in front of her, Viola faces the enemy in flesh and blood. To discover that violence has marked his own life and he himself needs to be liberated and saved. In an act of altruism, Viola lures passive Farah into her active world and the tragic irony is revealed when Farah finds his life in death.

AFTER THE END OF THE WORLD– by Nadim Mishlawi

Creative Documentary - Current Status: In Post-production - Country: Lebanon

After the End of the World is a cartography gathering the testimonies of different characters as they try to make sense of Lebanon’s capital, Beirut, 20 years after the civil war left it ruined. Focusing on the frenzied urban development (and destruction) of the reconstruction period, the film is built around the exploits of a photographer who is convinced that the city of Beirut is disappearing. Exploring the possibility of a “science fiction” documentary, the film uses an array of different visual and audio material including Betamax tape, 16mm, news archives, still photography, and digital cinematography, transforming the screen into a plane of information depicting events, anecdotes, moments, and ideas, spiraling into a modern dystopia.

AIDA RETURNS – by Carol Mansour

Feature length documentary - Current Status: In Post-production - Country: Lebanon/Palestine

Looking for: Funding for post-production, and distribution

This film is a poignant, sometimes sad, sometimes painful, sometimes humorous, often absurd story of a double journey: the journey of loss as the director’s mother Aida struggled with Alzheimer’s losing herself, but finding solace in her repeated “returning” to the Yafa and Palestine of her youth; and the ultimate return journey back to Yafa and Palestine where Aida would finally rest. The film accompanies the director, as she engineers a way to return her mother to Yafa against all odds. It is a tribute to the lost past of the director’s family, an attempt to restore part of an individual and a collective memory, and a poetic nod and affirmation to all those exiled Palestinians forbidden from returning to their hometowns, even after death.

BEIRUT: EYE OF THE STORM – by Mai Masri

Documentary - Current Status: In Post-production - Year of production: 2021 - Looking for: Festivals, distribution

Noel & Michelle, multi-talented performers and songwriters, Hanine a journalism student and Lujain an Iraqi camerawoman, took the streets of Beirut along with hundreds of thousands of Lebanese to demand major economic and political reforms, and an end to the corrupt sectarian system. Beirut in the Eye of the Storm follows them during one year, from the euphoria of the popular uprising which was abruptly halted when Covid-19 struck Lebanon four months later, followed by the massive explosion in Beirut’s port on August 4, 2020, which decimated the heart of the capital and ruptured the lives of its people. Will the series of blows that hit Lebanon in the past few months culminating in the devastating blast in Beirut’s port succeed in destroying their struggle or will they find new ways to resist and hold onto their dreams of building a new Lebanon?

LE JOURNAL DE YASMINE – by Christian Abi Abboud

Feature Documentary, Social, Human rights - Current Status: Shooting - Countries: Lebanon/France

Looking for: Post production funds, Distribution

Un matin, Yasmine, 13 ans, et Salomé, 10 ans, montent dans la voiture de leur père. Ensemble, ils quittent Bordeaux, traversent les Alpes, gagnent Milan, prennent un vol pour la Turquie avant d’atterrir au Liban. Là-bas, Yasmine et Salomé vivent comme toutes les petites filles de leur âge : elles jouent, vont à l’école, s’amusent avec leurs copines. Comme toutes les petites filles libanaises, elles aiment la plage, les montagnes, les ballades dans les collines au couleurs méditerranéennes et les saveurs nationales. Et comme beaucoup d’enfants, elles souffrent du divorce de leurs parents. Lui est libanais, elle, est française. Et elle, a annoncé à la radio française que ses filles avaient été kidnappées par leur père. Soudain, Yasmine et Salomé ne sont plus des enfants comme les autres: du point de vue de la justice française, leur papa est hors la loi. Puis, la mère arrive à Beyrouth pour les récupérer. Mais que veulent vraiment Yasmine et Salomé ?

ON NE CACHE PAS LE SOLEIL AVEC UN DOIGT ! – by May Kassem

Documentary - Current Status: Post-Production - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Post-Production financing

A film on the struggle of undocumented immigrants in Paris in 1996 (les Sans Papiers de Saint-Bernard) and today, social and political struggles on the ground, labor strife, the conditions of refugees and the undocumented, the city itself, its public spaces, the inclusion/exclusion of its inhabitants.

An epic 6-part documentary unfurling the hopes and dreams of the struggle against immigration control 20 years ago and today, through the prism of memories, those of the filmmaker who was a militant involved in that struggle in 96, and her comrades who surface through archival material against the backdrop of Paris today.

A meditation on the city, with its rivers and trains portrayed as veins and blood running throughout, its inhabitants a vital part of that body, appearing in reflections on its multiple surfaces, mirrored, shadowed, anonymous and one.

OPERATION COLT – by Christophe Karabache

Drama, Thriller, Fantastic - Current Status: Script written - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Production/Funds

Clinging to vengeful impulses from his non-resolved past, haunted by a giant cyclops that is tracking him down, Jad find himself in the field of resonance of memories, where terrifying hallucinations clash with the cruelty of daily life, in a perpetually tormented country. Through three seasons of life, three moments of confrontation with a rough reality, the portrait of a man who always felt rejected, left out, a burden for his environment, of the life of a neighborhood, and that of a country. The child searches for sensuality and tenderness around him, finds it sometimes elsewhere. The adolescent, and his friends, confront social, academic, disciplinary, and police repression in vain – while attempting to explore their budding sexuality. The adult, impotent towards a present without future, is obsessed with the moment of death of the beings that conceived him, that of his second birth into a meaningless and wretched world.

THE SILENCE OF THE PLAIN – by Zeina Sfeir

Documentary - Current Status: In production - Country: Lebanon - Looking for: Production Fund

“The Silence of the Plain” deals with a crime that took place at the start of the war. But this is a film that adopts a narrative in the present and tackles a thorny and complex question: has the past really passed? We will seek the answer through a quest led by the director with her cousin, and other inhabitants of the Bekaa internal plain of Lebanon and its calm, limpid and silent plain. The crime treated in this film is not a simple memory of the atrocities of the war in the past, but in its continuity, it is then that the emotional resentment crystallizes in the words of the families, in their accounts which are of on the one hand full of nostalgia, and on the other hand adapted to strengthen their political position. The characters questioned by the director are her cousins, her aunt, but also relatives, journalists, former activists and inhabitants of the region. If the testimonies are controversial, contradictory on certain points, it is through key places that appear in all the stories that we will tell the story of the film, these places of memory will be the spaces where the stories intersect and tie the knot between different chapters of the film.

THERE’S A LIFE IN OUR IMAGINATION – by Ghina Daou

Feature creative documentary - Current Status: In early production - Countries: Lebanon/France

Looking for: Co-production / Broadcasters

In a Lebanon plagued by corruption, destroyed by the double explosion of August 4, 2020 and weakened by a financial crisis, 3 women of 3 different generations engaged since the October 2019 Revolution are each fighting in their own way. While Ruby, the youngest one moves away and fights alone in exile, Zeina and Halima throw themselves into the political struggle on the ground. I will follow their journeys over the period of two years, since the post-explosion and until the next legislative elections happening in the spring of 2022 and supposed to put an end to the dominance of the current regime. Three different journeys who complete one another. Side by side, they outline the path of Beirut, a city embracing yet again a new identity with a desire to be heard.

VALLEY OF EXILE – by Anna Fahr

Drama - Current Status: Production - Countries: Lebanon/Canada

Looking for: Post prod funds/Finishing funds and Sales and Distribution

Two sisters, Rima and Nour, whose parents were killed in Syria, escape to a refugee camp in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley after fleeing war-torn Damascus. While Rima, who is seven months pregnant, is set on reuniting with her husband and rebuilding their lives in Lebanon, her younger sister Nour is determined to find their missing brother and eventually return home to Syria. In the camp, the sisters form alliances with other women who have lost their fathers, sons and husbands to the war. These friendships propel them onto separate paths: Rima works odd jobs so that she can rent an apartment before her baby is born while Nour sets out to investigate their brother's whereabouts, risking her own safety in the process. As conditions in the camp worsen day by day, Rima and Nour begin to realize that their journey together into exile is not only a struggle for survival but ultimately a test of loyalty to their country, their family and each other.

Farah (31) returns to her hometown Tripoli in Lebanon only to find her city in crisis. Staying with her widowed father Mustapha (83), they constantly fight as his only wish is for her to adapt to the city's prevailing conservative identity. But there's a secret refuge: Mustapha's weekly all-male poetry club. Stubborn yet lovable, the men are fascinated by language. They share their poems over sweets and the agreement to disagree about everything. Realizing that in order to reach out to her father, Farah needs to get to the poet in him, she decides to join the club and address Mustapha in verses. But the poets will have to test her for weeks. Both Farah and Mustapha know that this is their chance for one last and important conversation — especially when the October revolution erupts nationwide.

AS ABOVE, SO BELOW – by Sarah Francis

Hybrid Essay/docu-fiction - Country: Lebanon - Year of production: 2020 - Looking for: Festivals

A group of people roams in a bare landscape around a set of swings as their only settlement, as if mapping, exploring, reorganizing the open territory they are in. As they move, changes in soundscapes make them virtually cross geographies. In the sky, a moon-like satellite roves above their heads, following them like an omen. The moon, once symbolizing cyclical times, myths and new beginnings, is now the satellite waiting to be conquered and colonized. Reality and fantasy intertwine in an existential quest. Is a new beginning really possible? As below, so above.

BEIRUT HOLD’EM - by Michel Kammoun

Running time: 103 min / Genre: Social Drama / Year of production: 2021 / Looking for: World Sales, Distribution, Festivals

Beirut Hold'em depicts the life of Ziko, a 40-year old ex-con and petty gambler, and his three boyhood friends, in a seedy, lower-middle class district of Beirut today. Released from prison, Ziko wants to restart his life. With his back against the wall, Ziko faces all the challenges in one go. But everyone knows that, once a gambler, always a gambler.

But Ziko's biggest fight turns out to be his inner struggle. Driven by a never-ending determination and a relentless will to survive, he sets out on his journey through contemporary Lebanese society, a place made of an incongruous mixture of violence and tenderness, a country on the edge of war and bankruptcy, where instability makes everyday life feel like a circus trapeze, and sheer existence is yet another form of gambling.

ERRANS - by Mira Adoumier

Running time: 67 min / Genre: Experimental Fiction / Year of production: 2020 / Looking for: Distribution

A woman arrives in Lebanon in search of a missing man, whom she met in Iceland a few years ago. Here, the buildings and landscapes still bear the traces of past conflicts, and the missing friend's absence is haunting the deserted and labyrinthine streets of Beirut. The siren song of the sea draws her to the south, towards Earth's mystical centre. Mira Adoumier's 'Errans' is an aural and visual essay which evokes the alienating sense of exile that the filmmaker herself grew up with. A beautiful and levitating visual work from a place and a state of mind where myths and cultures occupy parallel spaces. With Iceland's rugged landscapes and Beirut's urban topography as the two coordinates that her film is stretched out between, Adoumier's background as an artist is evident in her first longer film work. But there is also an elliptical narrative embedded in the impressionistic form of 'Errans'.

MIGUEL’S WAR - by Eliane Raheb

Running time: 128 min / Genre: Hybrid Documentary / Year of production: 2021

“Miguel's war” portrays a sensitive Lebanese gay man, strongly oppressed and shamed by his society all through his youth. In 1983 he participates in Lebanon’s civil war to prove that he can fight like a «real man». He fails. Traumatized by his experience, Miguel leaves to Spain. Just to get utterly lost in noxious destructive sexual relationships which bring him more harm than relief. It’s only now – more than 37 years after leaving Lebanon – that Miguel is willing to confront the ghosts of his past to finally find some emotional balance. Using documentary, animation, theater and archives, this hybrid film offers an experience of self-confrontation and catharsis.

A Lebanese filmmaker travels from New York to Beirut to conduct research for a film that he wants to make about blind children in the mountains of Lebanon. He arrives to Beirut with a chronic condition that had been affecting his eyes and causes him to go straight into surgery, temporarily blinding him via patches covering his eyes. He uses the healing time to reflect, write and spend time with his family as well as location scout whilst not seeing. The filmmaker then begins to visit the blind institute where he will conduct his research and attempts to cast someone to play himself in parallel, which doesn’t go as planned. Little does the institute know that Karim has no treatment to pitch but continues to visit the classrooms and attend in order to find his characters. He begins to become closer to Lyne, a 10 year old blind girl who dreams of becoming a singer. Her imagination begins to take her beyond a world of sight, overlapping with the filmmakers research.

ALL OF YOUR STARS ARE BUT DUST ON MY SHOES - by Haig Aivazian

Running time: 17'33" / Genre: non-fiction / Year of production: 2021

All of Your Stars Are but Dust on My Shoes (2021) tracks the public administration of light and darkness as an essential policing tool. The video moves between cities like New York and Paris, with the artist's native Beirut setting the central pulse. Creating an associative genealogy that moves from whale oil lamps to gas lanterns to LED bulbs, from blackouts to curfews, the video is comprised of found footage and material from the artist's own phone. Layering, splicing, and confronting disparate kinds of sound and image, Aivazian generates a sensorial meditation on how the fundamentals of human vision—light hitting the retina—were mechanized into tools that capture our movements, be it in everyday life or on screen.

SANDJAK - by Chantal Partamian

Running time: 8m 59 sec / Genre: Documentary / Year of production: 2021/ Looking for: Lebanese/ European Distributor

Navigating three types of images, shot in three different periods, the film explores the poetics of haunting through compositions of images that attempt to create an entanglement between the past and the present. An intimate but detached voice, a little stoic even, speaking of countless losses. The repeated affirmation of belonging to a place that is no longer. It is an exercise in the dismantlement of the Sandjak camp space. The haunting of the present by absences. The fragmentation of history and memory. The experience in the margins and the historical anachronism of a people evolving in temporal landscapes.
